GLASS-FRONT BOOKCASES

Naturally dark Walnut and rich red Cherry combine in these glass-front bookcases. The shorter style at left has classic Arts & Crafts elements such as the broad overhanging top, bracketed with contrasting corbels. I made the taller unit with faux-mullioned doors. Adjustable shelves allow flexibility in how you display books and collectibles.

OFFICE FURNITURE

DESK WITH SIDE SHELVES

Cherry in living color

Don't be surprised if your Cherry furniture looks fairly light when it is first delivered. The wood needs a little time to mellow into its characteristic warm red glow. Each board is unique, with different figure and tones.

Part of my art as a furniture maker is to carefully select what boards will be placed together to get a pleasing result. Big factory production doesn't allow for this attention to detail, so typically "store-bought" Cherry furniture is stained dark to cover up the variances in the wood.

My grandfather's antique Craftsman desk was the inspiration for this piece. The concept of a library table with side shelves comes from the 100-year-old original, but the updates are definitely 21st century, with the signature Sandhill arch, and lighter, modern feel. I inherited Grampa's desk, I wonder who this one will be handed down to someday?

A traditional office desk gets the Sandhill treatment crafted in Maple with signature arches and flat-panel construction. The pull-out work surface and file drawer are all business, but the elegant look makes it fit nicely in the home office environment.

OPEN BACK BOOKCASES

Not just for books, open back “bookcases” work well for displaying sculpture, pottery or, my favorite: art glass. The solid Cherry sample, above left, has two adjustable shelves and flat-panel construction. The Maple with Mahogany option is a variation of my fern stand with a fixed shelf joined to the sides with a sliding dovetail and a 4-square cut out design.

COMMERCIAL OFFICE FURNITURE

Admittedly, most of my work ends up in people's homes. However I am occasionally called upon to create furniture for business settings. The 9' long conference table is made of knotty Alder with Cherry trim and base. It is slightly hexagonal and rolls on hidden casters. These Morris-style chairs are quarter sawn White Oak with leather upholstery.

- 30" T x 108" W x 40" D (conference table)
- 46" T x 32" W x 28" D (chair)
- 16" T x 22" W x 16" D (ottoman)
- Durable commercial finish.
